

Prayers for the Quarters of the Day

Morning - facing East

Hail to the Divine in day's first light.
The rising Sun in the pink sky, a symbol of new beginnings .
May I be mindful of the element of Air.
The breath of life. Perfect balance.
In this new day, may my spirit soar like the Eagle.
Gentle and clear-headed in motion.

Mid Day - facing South

Hail to the Divine in the height of the day.
The risen Sun in the brightness of mid-hour, a symbol of action.
May I be mindful of the element of Fire.
Of strength and determination
In this hour may I realize my inner power.
Like the blinding brilliance of the Sun.

Sundown - facing West

Hail to the Divine in the light that fades.
The setting Sun in crimson sky a symbol of completion.
May I be mindful of the element of Earth.
Grounding, manifestation.
In this hour may I draw close to me, that which is needed
Like the soil receiving a fallen seed.

Night/Midnight - facing North

Hail to the Divine in this hour of darkness
The Sun's light reflected in the moon a symbol of the Spark Within.
May I be mindful of the element of Water.
Cleansing and Renewal.
In this hour may I realize that some things need to be left behind.
Let stresses and concerns of the day fall away into the river of the night
So that I may find renewal and comfort in my slumber.
